A Brief History of North Park University

North Park University's roots can be traced back to a church basement in Minneapolis, Minn., in 1891, where classes in music, religion, language, and business gave Swedish immigrants education and skills to prosper in a new nation. With an offer of land in Chicago, the school moved to the North Park neighborhood just north of the city limits, which at that time ended at Irving Park Road.

In the fall of 1894, Old Main, the first building on campus, was completed. The Georgian Revival structure housed all departments of the school—classrooms, faculty offices, sleeping quarters, library, gymnasium, and dining room. In the 1920s, pilots used the cupola atop Old Main as a landmark to find Orchard Field (today's O'Hare International Airport), as the cupola was the tallest point on the city's north side.

Since that time, North Park has expanded and adapted its educational mission to the changing times. At various times it included a seminary, academy, junior college, four–year liberal arts college, and, since 1997, a university. In recent years, much time and many resources have been invested in renovating campus facilities, including the 2001 construction of the Brandel Library; the 2003 renovation of the central campus green; the 2004 construction of the Holmgren Athletic Complex for football, soccer, softball, and baseball; the acquisition of the Park North student residence in 2005; the addition of the Helwig Recreation Center and Sawyer Court student residence in the fall of 2006; and the renovation of Burgh Hall in 2008, Ohlson Hall in 2009, Sohlberg Hall in 2011, and Anderson Hall in 2012. In the fall of 2012, the University broke ground for the Johnson Center for Science and Community Life.

Mission

The mission of North Park University is to prepare students for lives of significance and service through education in the liberal arts, professional studies, and theology.

Vision

Our vision, building on our core institutional identity—distinctively Christian, intentionally urban, purposefully multicultural—is to fashion a university of uncommon character and enduring excellence where faith, learning, and service meet.

Educational Ideals

Reflecting the core values which shape our distinctive learning community, students at North Park University experience an education that:

- Is rooted in and committed to the Christian faith and its sacred text, the Bible
- Engages Chicago as a dynamic context for learning and service
- Embraces all people and celebrates the richness of cultural difference
- Affirms learning in all its forms—in the classroom and beyond—as a gift, a joy, and a sacred obligation
- Encourages dialogue as a means of learning where open inquiry, integrity, and civility guide our life together
- Seeks to form and transform the whole student (intellectually, socially, and spiritually)
- Values each student for who he or she is and will become

ACADEMIC REGALIA

Today's academic costume is a legacy of the Middle Ages. In that period, the loose-fitting academic gowns, which today are merely decorative, served a useful purpose—keeping warm in the drafty and unheated stone buildings of the medieval university. Academic hoods were equally useful for keeping the head warm. But then, as now, clothing served not only practical purposes, but was also a way to define status. When the practical uses of academic garb were superseded by central heating, the symbolic use remained.

Most academic gowns in the United States today are black. The unadorned bachelor's gown is the simplest in design. The master's gown is somewhat more ample, with a peculiar half-sleeve. The doctoral gown is yet more generous of cut and distinguished by velvet facing and three velvet chevrons on the sleeve. The velvet may be black, or it may reflect the color of the wearer's degree. You will notice, however, that some faculty are more colorfully attired. These more splendid gowns have traditionally denoted degrees from European universities, where each institution prescribes its own regalia. In recent years, however, American institutions have increasingly departed from the somber black and adopted their own more colorful garb for doctoral degrees.

Academic hoods reflect both the wearer's degree by the size of the hood and the color of the velvet trim, and the institution from which the degree was earned. At North Park, hoods are worn by both graduates and faculty. The degree colors commonly found at North Park are:

White	Arts and Letters
Gold	Science
Apricot	Nursing
Pink	Music
Scarlet	Theology or Divinity
Peacock Blue	Community Development
Drab	Business Administration, Economics, Management
Light Blue	Education
Dark Blue	Philosophy
Purple	Law
Green	Medicine
Brown	Fine Arts

The hood linings carry the colors of the school at which the degree was earned.

ACADEMIC MACE

A common symbol in modern academic processions, the tradition of a mace stems from a medieval weapon but has a function closer to a monarch's scepter, as it represents authority. When used in academic processions, the mace symbolizes the institution's academic mission.

The mace used by North Park University encompasses three symbols which represent our educational mission. First, the torch reflects the school motto, "In Thy Light Shall We See Light." Second, the growth metaphor calls attention to the holistic intellectual, emotional, and spiritual maturity we seek to nurture in students. Third, the three-fold nature of the composition of the mace (the three legs of the stand, its three layers, and the three flames) simultaneously represent the Trinity of the Christian tradition, three components of the University's academic program (liberal arts, professional studies, and theological education), and the three segments of our institutional identity (distinctively Christian, intentionally urban, and purposefully multicultural).

The mace is constructed from walnut and hammered brass. These materials combine a strong color contrast with warm tonality. The materials also are linked with the growth and light symbolism of the mace. The walnut portion has been shaped in an organic curvilinear manner to suggest growth, and the brass portion has been hammered to cause light to flicker over its surface in a flame-like way. The complex interaction between these materials and the symbolic meaning of the mace is illustrated through the torch flames, which can also be seen as plant leaves or sprouts.

PRESIDENT'S REGALIA

President Parkyn wears academic regalia representing the presidency of North Park University. The robe and hood feature blue and gold fabric, the colors of the University. In addition, the traditional three chevrons on each sleeve, indicative of the doctorate, are augmented by a fourth chevron which represents his position as president of the University.

PRESIDENT'S MEDALLION

The medallion and chain worn by President Parkyn indicate his position as president of the University. The medallion exhibits the seal of the University, which is used only by the president in his official functions. The medallion is of cast bronze with blue inlay. The chain is comprised of 20 small circular elements, each stamped with the seal of the University. The names and years of service of the nine presidents of the University are engraved on the back side of the medallion.

COMMENCEMENT LITANY

President Parkyn and Provost Jones

PROVOST JONES

Mr. President, on behalf of the faculty of North Park University, I have the pleasure to present the members of the graduating class of 2013. These students have been approved by the faculty of North Park University for graduation, and we now present them to you for conferral of their degrees.

PRESIDENT PARKYN

This indeed is a glorious moment. Years of diligent work have led to this milestone; you have reason to be proud of your accomplishment.

The mission of North Park University is to prepare students for lives of significance and service through study in the liberal arts, professional programs, and theology. This task is not completed in our graduates; indeed it has only begun and will continue over the course of a lifetime.

Our vision, building on our core institutional identity—distinctively Christian, intentionally urban, and purposefully multicultural—is to fashion a university of uncommon character and enduring excellence where faith, learning, and service meet. You are evidence that we are advancing this vision.

As you stand this day, prepared to receive your academic degrees, I challenge you to hear once more the articulation of commitments and values which are central to North Park University, and in the presence of those gathered today—parents and siblings, spouses and friends—to affirm them as your own.

FACULTY

We affirm learning as a gift, a joy, and a sacred obligation.

GRADUATES

As graduates of North Park University we embrace learning and agree to share willingly our knowledge and wisdom with others. We accept responsibility for advancing through the rest of our lives what we have learned here. We also recognize that learning brings with it the responsibility to make the world a better place, for ourselves and for others.

FACULTY

We affirm the life of faith.

GRADUATES

As graduates of North Park University we join together our spiritual and intellectual lives, knowing that neither is complete without the other. We pledge faithfulness to the ideals of this University as it recognizes knowledge, commits to truth, and searches for God.

FACULTY

We affirm people of all races, cultures, and ethnicities as integral to the vision of the kingdom of God and engage the city of Chicago as a dynamic context for learning and service.

GRADUATES

As graduates of North Park University we will strive to show reverence for all human life, to treat all people with dignity and respect, and to work together for the common good. As we leave this place, we will continue to explore the world through the perspective of others.

PROVOST JONES

Will you who have heard the witness of these students—your sons and daughters, sisters and brothers, wives and husbands, friends and colleagues—do all in your power to support these persons in their lives as graduates of North Park University?

PEOPLE

We will.

PROVOST JONES

Let us join now in prayer for these persons who have achieved the goals set before them and who present themselves for their academic degrees.

On this day of celebration we pray for the class of 2013. Open their hearts to your grace and truth. Fill them with your holy and life-giving Spirit. Keep them in the faith and communion of your holy church. Sharpen their minds toward the service of your kingdom. Teach them to love others as Jesus Christ loves the world. Send them into the world in witness to your love, and bring them at last to the fullness of your peace and glory. Amen.

PRESIDENT PARKYN

You have been diligent in your studies and have attained the requirements stipulated for your respective academic degree. You have affirmed the mission and spirit of this University. With the affirmation of the faculty, by authority of the Board of Trustees, and in exercise of the powers granted by the State of Illinois, as President of North Park University it is my privilege to confer on you the academic degree which you have attained, with all the rights, privileges, and honors appertaining to that degree.

You may present yourself for your diplomas.

HONORARY AWARD RECIPIENT
EBOO PATEL, FOUNDER AND PRESIDENT, INTERFAITH YOUTH CORE

On September 26, 1893, a small group gathered to lay the cornerstone of Old Main, the University's first building. This date was chosen because leaders of the school's founding church were in Chicago that week to visit the World Columbian Exposition and specifically to participate in the 1893 Parliament of World Religions. The Parliament was the first attempt in history to form a global dialogue of faiths, predicated on the conviction that people of faith have more in common than they hold in difference. Interfaith dialogue and collaboration was born in Chicago.

A century later this same city became the birthplace of the Interfaith Youth Core founded by Eboo Patel. IFYC imagines a world where young adults come together to make the world a better place, drawn to each other by their individual faith commitments.

IFYC prepares and mobilizes young adults to make the world a better place because God calls us to this mission. IFYC believes we can make the world a better place together because the values we hold in common—compassion, mercy, hospitality, and service—are values which extend beyond the boundaries of any one person's individual faith and beyond the convictions of any one faith tradition.

After completing his undergraduate years at the University of Illinois, receiving a doctorate in the sociology of religion as a Rhodes Scholar at Oxford University, and returning to his home city of Chicago, Eboo Patel founded the Interfaith Youth Core because he believed then, and still believes today, that young adults of different faiths can change the world when they work together around common commitments to service and dialogue.

As the 1893 Parliament of World Religions was organized in Chicago, so too the Interfaith Youth Core is part of America's greatness, born in the city of Chicago and dedicated first to the people of this city. Modeled on a framework for interfaith collaboration effecting social change, IFYC advances a respect for people's faith identities, nourishes positive relationships between people of different religious backgrounds, and promotes common action for the common good.

Since the day when the founders of North Park University gathered with the 1893 Parliament of World Religions and from there came immediately to lay the cornerstone of the University's first building, North Park University has been committed to do justice, love kindness, and walk with God—as the Hebrew prophet instructed. So too, on this day when we celebrate our 120th annual commencement, we recognize the life and work of Eboo Patel, who draws together people of faith from around the globe—Muslims, Christians, Jews, Hindus, and many others—to labor side-by-side for a better world, drawn together as one by the common values which emanate from within their individual faith traditions.

It is in this spirit that North Park University is pleased to recognize
Eboo Patel
